FAFNIR GmbH

Production at the FAFNIR Hamburg site continues in virtually all areas, and the factory doors remain open to associates and temporary employees.

In this past week, however, new and modified work processes in the battle against the coronavirus have been implemented.

We are observing developments in the spread of the coronavirus and the resulting illness (COVID-19) very closely and complying with the latest directives from leading government and health authorities so that we can be sure of initiating promptly any and all measures that are required for the protection of our associates and customers.

In implementing these directives, the company follows its own in-house standards as well as regulations at the national or regional level.

As the coronavirus pandemic continues to advance, we are doing everything we can to aid our customers.

As of today, we do not have any reports of cases of COVID-19 at FAFNIR GmbH in Hamburg.

Our supplies of raw materials can at this time be classified overall as non-critical; we currently have sufficient materials in stock to continue operation of our production lines.

At this time, we see that flexibility is more important than ever before.

We are monitoring the constantly changing situation and will notify you of any updates whenever there are changes in the future.

Thank you for your continued loyalty.
